

The Safety Needs of a Lone Worker

Definition of a

LONE WORKER

An off-site employee who works or travels away from their company's office for an extended period of time.

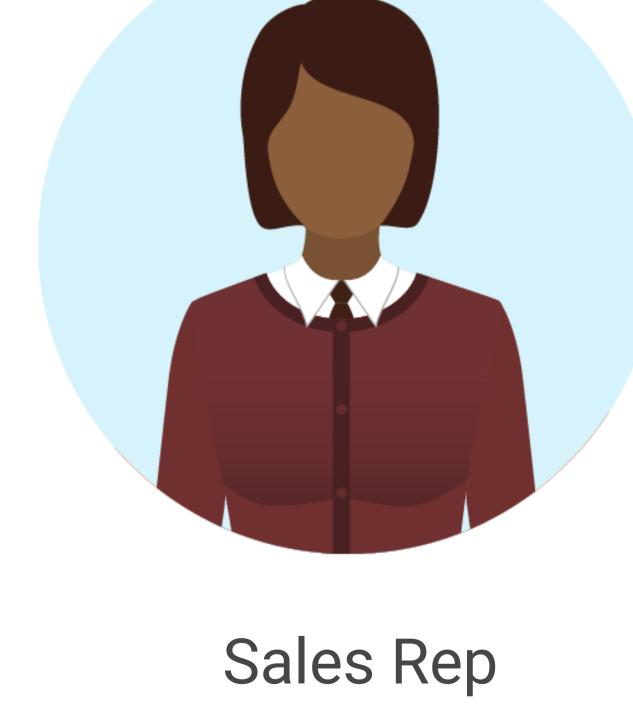

Types of off-site employees: Field Worker Lone Worker

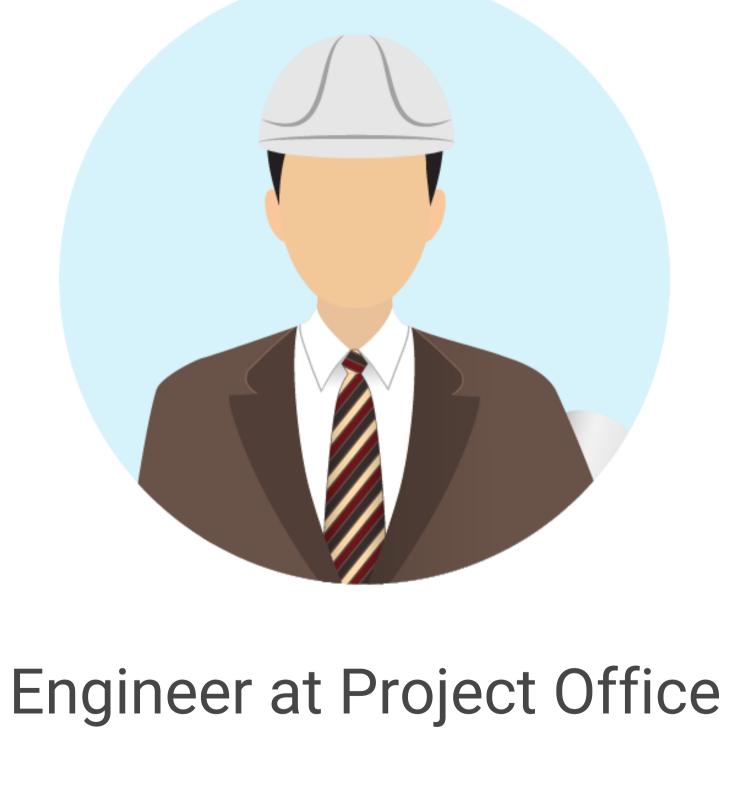

Installer

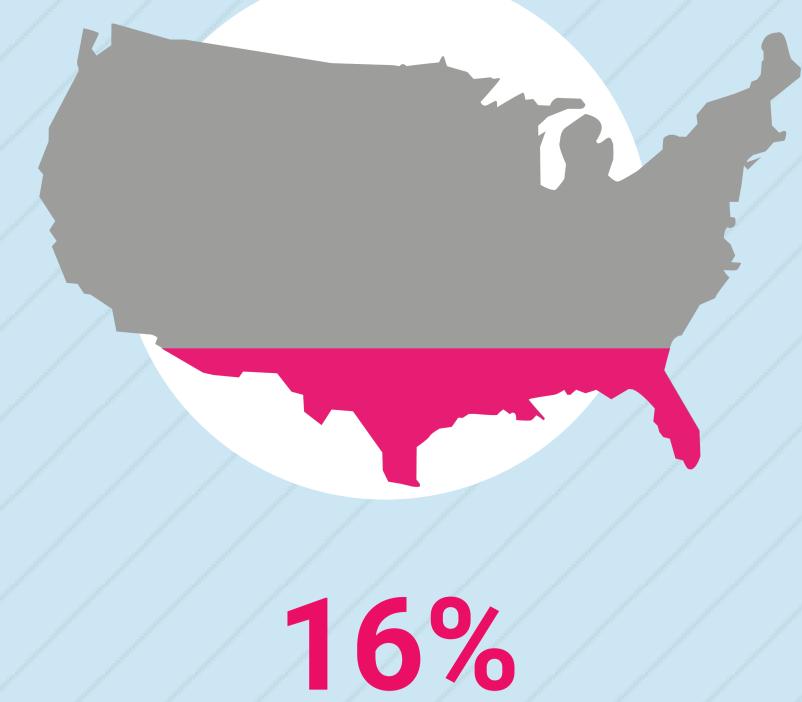

Traveling Worker

Remote Worker

In the U.S., approximately works remotely 1

of the total workforce

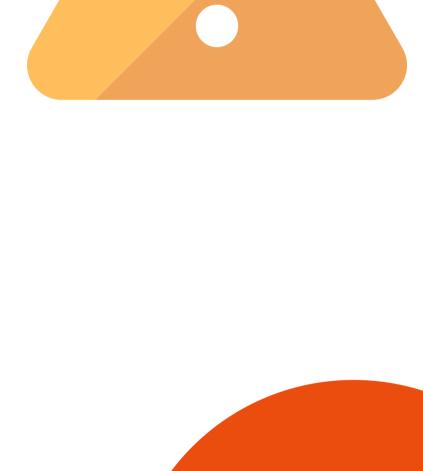

remote workers by 2028² and when it comes to safety,

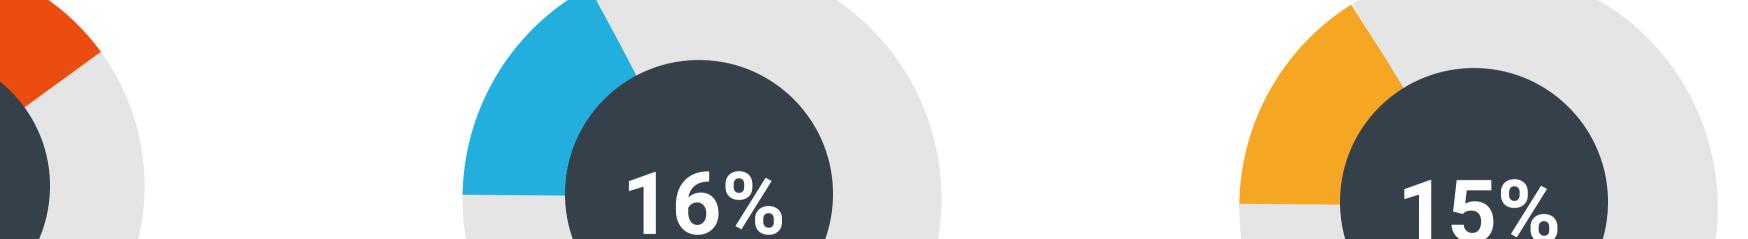

Nearly Americans feels unsafe at work

1 Source: https://www.bls.gov/news.release/atus.t06.htm 2 Source: https://www.upwork.com/press/2019/03/05/third-annual-future-workforce-report/

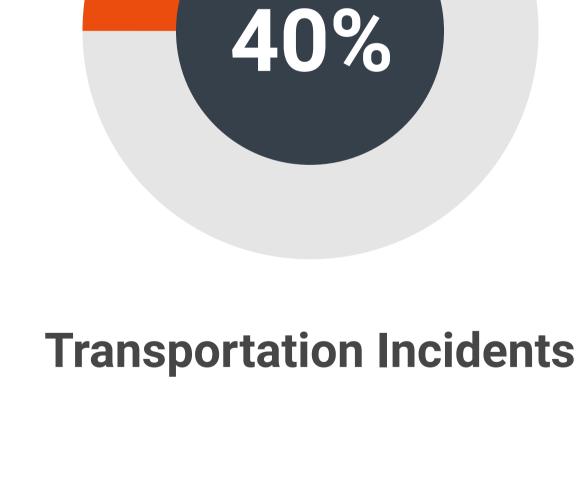

3 Source: https://www.shrm.org/hr-today/trends-and-forecasting/research-and-surveys/pages/workplace-violence.aspx

What are their safety risks?

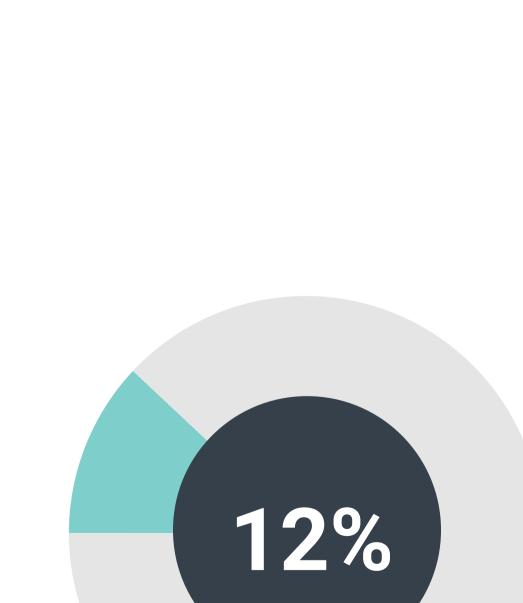

The most deadly workplace injuries:

Contact with Objects/

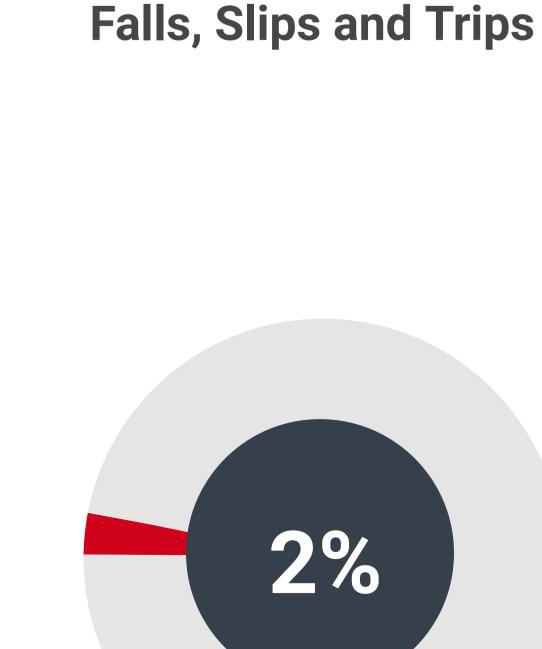

Equipment

4 Source: https://www.bls.gov/news.release/cfoi.t02.htm

Violence

Harmful Exposure

15%

How can you keep lone workers safe?

Fires

52% prefer to via text

message

Offer anonymous tip texting to 30%

of workers are

emergency plans

not aware of for modern

Maintain Consistent communicate

Communication Have regular check-ins and communicate on their terms

61% of lone workers would be more likely to report an incident anonymously

Provide training for incidents that could occur on and off-site

Train for all types of responses

Take a look at our recent analysis on workplace safety and preparedness.

workers and other employees think?

LEARN MORE