

#MeToo Movement in Healthcare

of women will be sexually harassed one or more times throughout their careers

Unwanted physical touching was only formally reported

Only 300 of women who experienced sexual coercive behavior reported it Source: U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) experience a staggering amount of sexual harassment incidents. Nurses and Nurse Practitioners (NPs) Physician Assistants (PAs)

In healthcare, nursing professionals anatomy or body parts

Leering and sexual comments about

57%

64%

Deliberately standing too close

57%

62%

51%

Unwanted groping, hugging, patting or other physical contact it often goes unreported.

of nurses and NPs experienced harassment from administrators, healthcare-related personnel, patients and others

44%

of nurses, PAs and NPs reported the perpetrator happen so frequently to nurses, was a subordinate 74%

of those who experienced sexual harassment and reported it said no action was taken of the incidents reported resulted in an investigation

Only

51% 5/0/0 feared being didn't think any

Of those who didn't report an incident:

accused of overreacting action would be taken

41%

feared the perpetrator would retaliate

11.8 times

leering or sexual comments about anatomy or body parts

The average number of times nurses, NPs and PAs were harassed over the last three years:

8.5 times explicit or implicit propositions to engage in sexual activity

12.5 times

deliberately standing too close

7.7 times unwanted groping, hugging, patting or other physical contact

Nurses, personal/home health aides, in-home homes, often in isolation or without the typical caregivers and home care workers work in patients' protections found in traditional healthcare settings. 30%

of these workers reported being sexually harassed

Many reports say these incidents are underreported.

Source: Nurse.com

Source: Medscape

balance between taking care of patients and prioritizing their personal safety. How can you help keep your nursing staff safe while also protecting your bottom line? Discover what technology you can provide your nurses with to encourage them to come forward when they've experienced sexual harassment or any other incident where they feel unsafe. Download the ebook

Your nursing personnel are trying to find the Workplace

Violence

